

International Day, 2011

George Cattan

On May 20 the International Day held at Rinaldi school was a wonderful day. I invited an old friend who had attended classes at school two years ago. I enjoyed the beautiful performance. My favorite performance was the Iranian Assyrian show because it was a line dance similar to our traditional dance in Syria, which we call "Dabkeh."

After the show the lunch was great. I tried to have some of every kind of food from all over the world. I took pictures with friends, students and teachers.

In general the International Day celebration is the best way to show how much the relations between Americans-- citizens and immigrants-- from different origins are the best. It's proof that multicultural nations without discrimination are the most civilized in the world.
